Taj Mahal

The building complex incorporates the design traditions of Indo-Islamic and Mughal architecture. It employs symmetrical constructions with the usage of various shapes and symbols. While the mausoleum is constructed of white marble inlaid with semi-precious stones, red sandstone was used for other buildings in the complex similar to the Mughal era buildings of the time. The construction project employed more than 20,000 workers and artisans under the guidance of a board of architects led by Ustad Ahmad Lahori, the emperor's court architect.

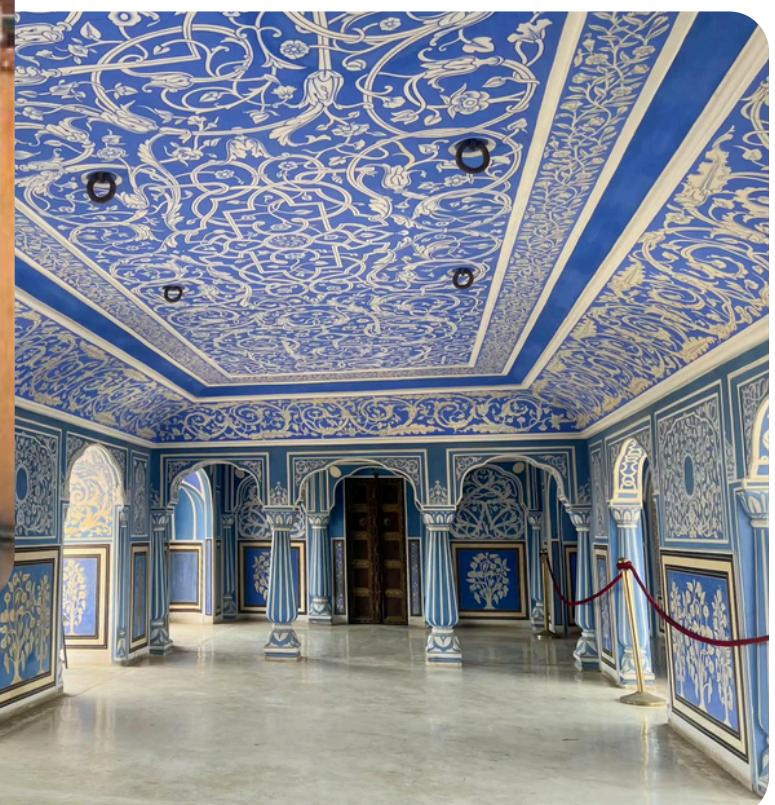

Jaipur[•]

Modern Jaipur was founded in 1727 by the visionary Maharaja Swai Jai Singh II of Amer, a descendant of the Kachchhawa Rajput dynasty who ruled from 1699 to 1744. His capital, Amber, was located about 11 kilometers from Jaipur. The reason for the move was due to the increasing population and the consequent insufficient water supply. He studied numerous architectural texts and consulted with various advisors before finally planning the city of Jaipur. With the help of the prominent architect Vidyadhar Bhattacharya from Bengal, who later became the Maharaja's chief architect, he planned and designed the buildings, including the Royal Palace in the center of the city and the thick city walls that were built after the war with the Maratha Empire. He was also a lover of astronomy, mathematics, and astrophysics, and successfully built Jaipur with architectural elements based on Vastu and other texts.

RickShaw

originally denoted a pulled rickshaw, a two- or three-wheeled cart generally pulled by one person carrying one passenger. The first known use of the term in English was in 1879. Over time, cycle rickshaws (also known as pedicabs or trishaws), auto rickshaws, and electric rickshaws were invented, and have replaced the original pulled rickshaws, with a few exceptions for their use in tourism.

Pulled rickshaws created a popular form of transportation and a source of employment for male labourers within Asian cities in the 19th century. Their appearance was related to newly acquired knowledge of ball-bearing systems. Their popularity declined as cars, trains, and other forms of transportation became widely available.

BEING WELL THE NATURAL WAY

Traditional Thai massage combines broad and focused acupressure along energy lines called sen, Indian Ayurvedic principles, and assisted yoga postures. Oils and lotions are generally not used, and the recipient wears lightweight and loose clothing during treatment. There is constant body contact between the giver and receiver, but rather than simply rubbing on muscles, the body is compressed, pulled, stretched and rocked. The concept of metta (loving-kindness), based on Buddhist teachings, is an integral part of this practice. Well-known practitioners also emphasize meditation on the part of the practitioner as integral to the effectiveness of this practice.
